

The Dark Traveller

Written by Geoffrey M. Spalding

HER CHOICE TO SACRIFICE MUST BE MADE...

Petra Gordon should be focusing on her PhD, but it is instead the world of legends which calls to her mind.

Determined to prove the truth of the Great Flood to honour her deceased father, Petra becomes exposed to a world of ancient prophecies, ones with imposing implications for the future of all mankind.

When the truth is impossible to believe, Petra must face choosing her career and reputation, or the saving of anyone who will listen to her...

Geoffrey Spalding is an author and screenwriter who has travelled the world and studied with indigenous elders and mystics in South and Central America and through the Middle East, Asia and the Himalayas in Nepal. As a student of science, philosophy and mysticism, his science fiction stories are driven by the concept that science fiction is 'Philosophy in Motion.' It allows him to explore the big questions of who we are and where we came from.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR

How did you come up with the title for your book? I came across the term 'Dark Traveller' when I was doing research on comets for my novel. The term refers to a comet which appears to have fallen asleep and it makes it harder for astronomers to see. The danger comes from not knowing that it exists.

Why did you write this book? What were some of your inspirations?

I wrote this book for two reasons. Firstly, I wanted readers to know how important it is to have the courage to stand up for your truths. Secondly to inspire the readers to live each day as if it your last day on earth because one day it will be. You will never regret the things you did or tried, even if you failed because it is in the journey that the magic reveals itself.
